PALZER AND KILBANE
MAKE AN IMPRESSION

Both Are Well Received by Fight Fans of Milwaukee and Tom Andrews Writes of Their Plans For the Future.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 16.—Milwaukee has been entertaining two very prominent boxers the past week—Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion of the world, and Al Palzer, the "white hope" whom Tom O'Rourke says will some day be heavyweight champion. Johnny Kilbane, through his gentlemanly behavior, has made many friends here, and will always be remembered as a warm welcome.

He impressed the fight followers as one of the cleverest boys ever appearing here, and they do not wonder now, after seeing him in action, that he took the crown away from Abe Attell. Johnny says he is sincere in wanting to meet Ad Wolgast for the championship. At present he has no title match under consideration, although his manager, Jimmy Dunn, expects to close something in New York in the near future.

The boy does not take kindly to stage work, and says he would prefer to engage in real ring battles.

"Palzer has had considerable trouble with his nose lately, and was operated on a few days ago," said Tom O'Rourke, manager of the "white hope," while discussing future prospects. "The big fellow will require about six weeks to have his nose in proper condition, and during that time we expect to do a little theatrical work among the burlesque houses. We will probably continue our way toward the Pacific coast, unless something unforeseen should happen. I expect a match with Bombardier Wells, at San Francisco, for July fourth, will be fixed up in a short time. There is very little difference between the promoters and Mr. Wells, so that I think the match is practically certain. Of course we expect to win it, or we should not enter into it. If we do, it will be the bigger game we will seek." Palzer was well received in Milwaukee and made a very favorable impression.

Little Stories About Baseball

By W. A. Phelon

WHEN I heard that the Reds intended to train at Columbus, Georgia," says Frank Smith, the husky pitcher, "I had strange visions of the long ago, and was almost drowned in a flood of memories. Columbus, Georgia—the most strenuous place I ever ran against, and the one place where I had the most exciting moments of my baseball history.

"Many years ago, when I was new to the game, I was pitching for Birmingham, and was quite some hurler in the southern company. Anyway, the White Sox took me the year after—but that isn't part of this story. Anyhow, I got along very nicely that season, and when the regular schedule was over we arranged a post season series with the Columbus team, which had been cutting a wide swath in its own select company. That series, so far as the regular Birmingham team was concerned, fell through, most of the boys scattering for their homes, but, rather than lose whatever money was in sight, a strong picked team was recruited, with myself for pitcher, and down to Columbus we went.

"My bit for the entertainment was $50, and, through some strange and marvelous foresight, I collected before the game began, put the coin in pants pocket, and went on the field extremely happy, at peace with all the world. It proved to be a rattling good game, and scoring was the hardest toll. In the 7th inning we had the Columbus crew 1 to 0, and I was simply devoting my energies to keeping them from getting back that one run—when something happened.

"The umpire pulled a close decision, one that knocked a Columbus man out of a good chance to score. One minute later it seemed as if the whole population of Columbus was coming over the barriers and out upon the field—and every man of them seemed to have a gun. I never saw so many guns in one place at once, not even when I was watching a royal review of the German infantry. Cannon with great rawling black muzzles, revolvers, the terrible derringers of the south, which throw a bullet as big as a potato, old dueling pistols, every kind of a weapon you could mention, and all heading right out for the diamond. I stood watching the charge and pitying the umpire for a moment, and then I heard the leaders yelling, 'Kill the pitcher! Get that—of a pitcher! And then, tightly grasping my $50, I turned and went away.

"Never before or since have I run so fast or so far. I didn't stop to get my citizen's clothing. Not me. In full uniform and spiked shoes, I just went over the back wall of the Columbus ballyard, and kept right on running. Presently the battle began to die away, but I kept on running. Suddenly a form, dressed in tattered blue, gasping like a beached fish, rose up from nowhere, came up to me, and passed me on the full gallop, vanishing ahead of me, far down the dusty road. It was the umpire, and, no matter how hard I might try to run, I was sure to finish second.

"I never got my clothes. I never heard how the game ended. I never even stopped running till I reached the railroad depot, and there, as luck would have it, I caught a northbound train—I got my $50 and escaped with my life, and that was going some."

Caley Bragg and David Bruce-Brown
Millionaire Speed Drivers, To Duel

By Bert Smith

Great Santa Monica Race Will Find These Two Youngsters In the Ranks of Drivers Who Will Guide Thunderbolts About Eight Mile Course.

OS ANGELES, Cal., April 16.—Caley Bragg, the noblest Roman of them all, and one of the greatest motor racing pilots on earth, is to lock arms with Barney Oldfield, the greatest of them all, in the Santa Monica race, Saturday, May 1. These two champions are both sure bets, but they have had the experience of veterans.

Both are wealthy. Neither has entered the Santa Monica race to win the $10,000 prize, but for the honor of being champion road driver of the world. They will fight harder for the big trophy than for the fat purse. Bragg has the giant Fiat and Brown the monster Benz. Unassuming in his manner, willing to do a suit of overalls and mix with the mechanics, Caley Bragg has the heart of every motor enthusiast. He never boasts of anything he has ever done. When he trimmed Barney Oldfield on the Motordrome he was the first to shake hands with the former speed king, and this minute he is the prince of the fastest cars on earth.

Bragg still is a "kid." Though he has won notable victories and is in the van of all motor drivers, Bragg is a slight youth, about 135 pounds, 25 years old, and not robust. He has the brain of a wizard and uses his head every minute. True, he did not have the strength to crank his motor in the Savannah grand prize race last year, but he was in the running every second, and his wit made him a contender until Brown crossed the line in his Fiat, a winner. Pitted against Bragg is a big col-

One Legged Swimmer
Gets World's Mark

Legs Are Not Used as Formerly In Speed Swimming.

(BY LEWIS ARMS)

THAT a one-legged swimming man may break a record held by a two-legged aquatic expert is unusual and to some might even appear as impossible, despite the fact that it has been so recorded.

However, the more one knows of speed swimming the easier it is to believe that a one-legged man, with exceptional arm work, stands on a par with any swimmer. This is because the legs are not used to any extent for propulsion in speed swimming.

Those who have been taught to kick out like a frog kickers in swimming have learned the older methods. The newer way is to use the arms and propelling power as the legs used. It is left to the arms, alternating in overhand strokes, to pull the body through the water. This is the style of Daniels, Hardy and a number of other speed swimmers.

The trouble with the using of the legs is that the contracting of them preparatory to the kickout offers more resistance to headway than is speed ahead gathered in the kick. The alternating, overhand arm stroke offers no resistance whatever from the fact that the arm is withdrawn from the water when it completes its power stroke. That makes it of course the ideal speed propeller.

Everyone, including even his playing enemies, hopes that Christie Mathewson will have a good season this year. There never was a more clean cut player on the diamond than this tall, handsome New York twirler who has been the hero of numberless contests.

Incidentally McGraw says Mathewson is the best pitcher that ever lived and Matty retorts by saying "I was." That makes a dead heat.

It didn't take Detroit long to hit a winning stride.

There is something in that Ey Tah of Huhli's.

Ad Wolgast is said to have received an offer of $50,000 to meet Knockout Brown, Packey McFarland and Matt Wells in three successive engagements a week apart in New York. Inasmuch as none of the three would have the chance in the work of putting out the young Dutchman in ten rounds, it looks like a fine money-making chance. One that Tom Jones would jump at, for instance.

Cheer up Calloway, there is lots of luck left.

The baseball season has succeeded in eliminating baseball stars from the stage. Thankful for small favors.

About the only thing a reporter misses in life is money.

According to Los Angeles writers of the facts in the case. He knows he has no clinch.

There are those who say Oldfield will win. There are many others who are sure he will lose. Oldfield is the west man of them all. He admits that he has no clinch and he knows this is to be a battle royal. He is not pitted against men on a mile track. He must go out against the world's foremost drivers who are trained to the pink of condition.

Now, here is the handicap. Oldfield has been out of the game for a year. Though he is in wonderful condition, he is out of training as a racer. This means much. When he jumps into the Fiat he must take things easy. If Oldfield decides to drive his head off he will lose. Here is a chance to watch how well Barney can use his head.

De Palma Also.

Ralph de Palma in a Mercedes is the fourth man of this mighty quartet who is to be pitted in the battle for world honors. He is one of the greatest drivers on earth and for the first time in the history of motor racing in the west the daredevil Italian will meet Barney Oldfield.

Think of four such men sent away to a speed test that means a world record to the winner, a fat purse and a handsome cup! That is prize worth striving for and, believe me, every one of those drivers will fight. De Palma knows what he is up against, but he also knows how much he stands to win if his Mercedes should cross the line a winner on Saturday, May 4.

Now, there is another man who must be reckoned with—Ralph Mulford, who won the Vanderbilt cup race in a Lozier. He will pilot a Knox this year. This car, report says, is a hot one. It is as fast as the men in the east claim, as the Lozier which Mulford piloted to such a sensational victory. If this is true, look out for Mulford Saturday.

Jerry have entered into a reciprocity pact. The state legislature has enacted a bill providing that all motorcycle and automobile tourists may tour in the state 15 days of each year without a special license.

Uncle Sam is gradually adding the motorcycle to the list of vehicles in the war department. Color sergeant on Long, of the 11th cavalry at Fort Ord, Cal., has a motorcycle and is riding rings around his brother officers on the field.

TY COBB DISPLAYS
HIS TEMPERAMENT

Chicago, Ill., April 16.—Ty Cobb, outfielder for the Detroit Americans, left his team for Detroit last night. It was reported he was angry because his slumber was disturbed by trains passing near his window early yesterday. Manager Jennings stated he was suffering with a cold. Cobb did not play yesterday.

HIGH SCHOOL WINS
SCHOLASTIC TITLE

Defeats Institute in the Deciding Game of the Series by 7-to-4 Score.

Playing with the dash that has characterized its work all during the season the High school beat the Institute yesterday 7 to 4, and thereby won the scholastic championship of the city. Each team had won one game, and there was lots of enthusiasm over the third and deciding contest.

Cliff Hill opposed Jim Keady and outpitched the Institute heavyweight in fine style. Sam Sheels, hitting contributed greatly to the high school victory the elongated first baseman cracking out two triples, both coming in pinches. Keady walloped out a home run.

At the end of the fifth inning the high school led 2 to 2. In the sixth the Institute scored two runs, making the count 4 to 2. That looked exceedingly bad for the high, as Keady was twisting light ball at the time.

However, the high batters broke it up in the eighth lining when in a twisting light ball at the time.

They chased four runs over the pan and made victory sure.

The Institute team has on it some good players, but in the three games in which the teams have met the High school has proved itself much the better balanced club.

GOLFER PAYNE WINS
BLIND BOGEY MATCH

Left No Doubt of Result by Sitting Precisely on Colonel Himself.

W. F. Payne settled very definitely the ultimate status of the blind bogey contest at the Country club when it was found that his score of 82 minus the handicap of 13, conclusively trapped the "colonel" at the mark of 73.

Vance Stewart was second, just two strokes off. Third place went to Judge W. M. Petticoles, who scored 87 minus a handicap of 12. A golf scarf pin was the prize.

PHILADELPHIA AND CINCINNATI LEAD

Are the Only Two Clubs that Have Not as Yet Lost a Game.

Roger Bresnahan's St. Louis Cardinals succeeded in losing their first game of the season Monday, and inasmuch as Cincinnati won again it makes them the only two clubs that have not yet lost a game.

Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics also won again, which makes their 1912 scutcheon as yet unblemished. These two clubs are the only major league aggregations that have not yet lost a game.

The day was featured by the absence of Ty Cobb from the Detroit lineup, Cobb, by the way, going to Detroit last night. It is said that the great fielder was peevish because trains passed under his window early in the morning. Anyway Detroit was walloped badly by the White Sox, and it is a time that Jennings ought not to tolerate insubordination on the part of his players.

Detroit's star little shortstop Owen Bush has adjusted his difficulties with Owner Navin and has again donned the spangles for the Tigers.

Walter Johnson slipped across his first victory of the season yesterday when he let Wolverton's New York Highlanders down with four hits and knocked the first game that Washington has been able to get hold of this season. The victory, however, was more or less of a fluke as Daniels miffed a lone single and allowed McBride to go from first to home with the winning tally, the only one of the game incidentally.

WANT TOURISTS TO MEET ON THE ROUTE

Douglas, Ariz., April 16.—If Bert Smith, in charge of the Los Angeles Times automobile, and Harry C. Drom, chairman of tours for the Transcontinental Touring club of America, can be induced to meet on the borderland highway route, an unique event in the history of ocean to ocean automobile traffic will have taken place. To bring this about is the object of the efforts of the Douglas chamber of commerce and mines.
